Chandra and Carl said their day around their favorite colors, midnight blue and moss green. They married beneath a white iron chandelier, lit with hanging green lanterns and a crystal chandelier. Because they both work in the sciences, it seemed fitting for the science geeks to celebrate their marriage at a science museum. Carl says of their reception at the top of a magnificent dinosaur gift shop tower, for the guests' photo booth feature, he had an instant booth. The couple's gift: These gift baskets were moss-covered baskets filled with flower petals.

For one of a kind pics, Chandra and Carl stopped at the museum's Shower Place, which is home to a variety of exhibits on the science of water. & Chandra's six bridesmaids wore the same green dresses given with an accent that was tied in the hair. The big bride team also carried one of the groom's towels and carried this custom pillow embroidered with the couple's names and their wedding date.

The stems of Chandra's white roses that bouquet were wrapped in white and finished with a finished sequin. It was "it" on the middle tier of the elaborate wedding cake symbolized their love shared for miles, as the single ceremony programs were printed in green and was tied in white with their wedding together with a midnight blue ribbon.
